

THE INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL FOR GOVERNANCE EXCELLENCE

GOVERN Ends Update - Changing the Future
The GOVERN Boards journey to refresh GOVERN for IMPACT's Ends

The Use, Implementation, and Impact of the Policy Governance System on Board Governance and Organizations
Demonstrated Impact Team Pre-Pilot Study
Fryday-Field, Karen, Wiener, Kathy, Biery, Richard, Stevens, Kay, and Jennings, Sherry

Future Focused School Boards Impact Student Achievement
Bergen, Andrew

19 Lessons Learned by a Policy Governance Board
Maloney, Rick

A School Board Journey Through Ownership Linkage:
Juech, Michael

CONTENTS

The International Journal for Governance Excellence

Published by GOVERN for IMPACT

2206 Village West Drive South

Lapeer, MI 494446

U.S.A.

www.governforimpact.org

© 2021, 2020 GOVERN for IMPACT

All rights reserved

No part of this publication may be copied, reproduced, transmitted, or held in a retrievable system without the written permission of the publishers. Whilst every effort is made to ensure the accuracy of all material published in The International Journal for Governance Excellence, the publishers accept no responsibility for any errors or omissions. Views expressed by contributors are not necessarily those of the publishers/editors. Any statements expressed by professionals in this publication are understood to be general opinions and should not be relied upon as legal advice.

EDITOR

Ms. Karen Fryday-Field

EDITORIAL BOARD

Dr. Dolores Blueford

Mr. Bill Charney

Dr. Gwen DuBois-Wing

Ms. Karen Fryday-Field

Mr. Ted Humphrey

Ms. Linda Stier

Journal Layout

Carol Milton

Graphic Design

Colin Milton

03 FOREWORD

05 FEATURE
GOVERN for IMPACT – SHARING OUR
REFRESHED ENDS POLICIES

07 FEATURE
THE USE, IMPLEMENTATION, AND IMPACT FOR THE POLICY
GOVERNANCE SYSTEM ON BOARD
GOVERNANCE AND ORGANIZATIONS

27 ABSTRACT
FUTURE FOCUSED SCHOOL
BOARDS IMPACT STUDENT ACHIEVEMENT

28 OPINION
19 YEARS OF LESSONS LEARNED
BY A POLICY GOVERNANCE
BOARD ACHIEVEMENT

33 OPINION
A SCHOOL BOARD JOURNEY
THROUGH OWNERSHIP LINKAGE

36 CAROLINE OLIVER FUND FOR A NEW VISION

37 MEET THE EDITORIAL BOARD

FOREWORD

FROM THE EDITOR

Welcome to the inaugural issue of The International Journal for Governance Excellence, an e-journal dedicated to the promotion of knowledge and research in the practice of effective governance. Published tri-annually, The International Journal for Governance Excellence draws on the experience and expertise of leading researchers, consultants, practitioners, advisors, and administrators. This journal is dedicated to the field of governance and board leadership and is designed to deliver insight on the myriad governance excellence topics and issues facing boards and CEOs today. Through its various types of articles, the journal offers questions and possible approaches/solutions to assist with navigating and implementing continuous governance improvement.

We express our deep gratitude to our esteemed contributors for their valued contributions. We especially recognize the efforts of the GOVERN for IMPACT Demonstrated Impact Team for the report on their 4-year long pilot project, which you can read as our lead article. Also, read about our exciting new Editorial Board at the end of the journal.

This journal has been created to support you, your board and boards you serve to lead your organization to clear purpose, significant impact, ethical and prudent practice, while being engaged with and accountable to owners. We invite you to engage with the broader governance community in part through this journal

*Karen Fryday-Field,
BScPT, MCPA, MBA
Editor, The International
Journal for Governance Excellence*

EMPOWERING BOARDS. REIMAGINING THE WORLD...

GOVERN for IMPACT is a for-impact charitable international organization dedicated to building a world where boards lead the organization to achieving clear purpose and critical outcomes. We support boards to lead with integrity and prudence on behalf of their constituents to whom they are ultimately accountable. Whether elected or appointed, all governing boards have an innate duty of care to achieve these goals. Our work is inspired by the Policy Governance® system.

GOVERN for IMPACT engages to:

- Identify and disseminate Evidence-based Principles and Practices in Excellence in Governance, as informed by scholar/practitioner research with “real” organizations.
- Serve as the leading organization regarding development of excellence in the practice of Policy Governance®.
- Publish critical whitepapers on governance concepts and issues, enriched by our community’s deepest expertise.
- Develop, curate, and deploy a searchable, interactive online collection of multimedia resources to further inform the learning and practice of purpose-focused, principled, owner-accountable governance.
- Establish and implement advanced governance designation program(s) and other accessible learning systems.
- Galvanize a growing community of researchers, practitioners, consultants/coaches, and advocates, working together to expand governance excellence throughout the world.
- Lead and stimulate global conversations about how effective governance will address challenges facing corporations, governments, for-impact, non-profits, and the world.

FEATURE

GOVERN for IMPACT – Sharing Our Refreshed Ends Policies

McCarver, Pat
GOVERN for IMPACT Chair. Board of Directors

Ends policy development and the ongoing periodic refresh of these critical board values and policy directives, is crucial work for any Board of Directors. This work informs the purpose of the organization and also guides the CEO's strategy and results achieved, for specific people/groups, and at a value or worth important to the broader ownership.

At GOVERN for IMPACT, the Board has been actively working since November 2019 to scan the environment and reassess the needs that GOVERN is working to address, in order to update GOVERN's Ends Policies to be relevant and meaningful as we look to the future. In March 2020, the Board undertook a series of online ownership linkage in-depth, critical conversations. All of the information gleaned has been synthesized and used to inform the Board's decision-making to build the GOVERN refreshed Ends Policies. These were finalized and approved by the Board in November 2020. These policies are outlined in Figure 1.

The GOVERN Board of Directors wishes to express appreciation to the many people who contributed insight and thinking including:

- Many moral owners focus group participants.
- Prior Board Members whose terms were completed as this work proceeded.
- The GOVERN CEO, Karen Fryday-Field, Leadership Team, and Consistency Team who provided input and insight.
- Aimee White, President and Principal Evaluator, Custom Evaluation Services, who facilitated parts of our dialogue about our desired outcomes/results/impacts.

We now look forward as these refreshed Ends Policies are interpreted by our CEO and are moved forward to achieve the impact of governance excellence, inspired by Policy Governance[®], in our world.

Figure 1

ENDS POLICY

1.0 Global End

Current and potential affiliates, board members, organizational leaders, and those who support boards (collectively, “the governance community”) practice effective governance, as currently exemplified by Policy Governance®, at a worth greater than the cost to deliver it.

1.1 Governance Model

The governance community has a rigorously-defined, evidence-based model for effective governance.

1.2 Knowledge

The governance community has knowledge to achieve effective governance.

1.3 Model Use

The use of one or more rigorously-defined, evidence-based models for effective governance increases over time., at a worth greater than the cost to deliver it.

FEATURE

The Use, Implementation, and Impact of the Policy Governance System on Board Governance and Organizations

Demonstrated Impact Team Pre-Pilot Study

Fryday-Field, Karen, Wiener, Kathy, Biery, Richard, Stevens, Kay, and Jennings, Sherry

Introduction

Prologue

GOVERN for IMPACT believes that our world will be in good hands only when every organization built for the betterment of humanity is propelled by a clear vision of purpose and is led with a determination to create lasting results (impact), a deep commitment to operating with ethics, prudence, and justice, and an unwavering commitment to listen to its broader ownership and serve those people for whose benefit the organization or business exists.

In essence, organizational leadership refers first and foremost to governing effectively, as a critical precursor to managing well. Organizational governance is an obligation that has far reaching moral, legal, financial, cultural, strategic, and human consequences. Organizations exist to anticipate or respond to owners' values and perspectives.

By extension, each board's raison d'être is to direct and protect its organization/business, while serving as the integral bridge between its owners and the beneficiaries it serves.

Building and sustaining highly functioning boards is a holistic discipline, separate and apart from the chief executive management function. When both a board and its CEO pull in the same direction with strong clarity about their distinct and mutually dependent roles, there occurs a synergy that propels an organization, business or government entity to thrive, strengthening its impact on the people and communities it serves.

At GOVERN for IMPACT, not only do we imagine such a future, we diligently and deliberately work toward it—with devotion, passion, and unparalleled expertise. Our work and vision for impact has been inspired by Policy Governance®. GOVERN is committed to conducting and facilitating research in board governance and creating greater knowledge and understanding.

Origin and Philosophy behind the Demonstrated Impact Initiative of GOVERN for IMPACT (formerly International Policy Governance Association)

During the formational period of the International Policy Governance Association (IPGA), its leadership was well acquainted with the state of the literature on board governance having been engaged in some form or other in governance for much of their professional lives. (See following section on summary of governance literature.) Those who worked to launch IPGA did so to facilitate the spread and impact of a theoretical based system of governance (Policy Governance) that transformed how governance was perceived, experienced, practised, and thought or written about. This approach to governance was first designed by John Carver. Board governance literature was sparse and mostly composed of articles advocating the researcher's or author's beliefs regarding commonly held best practices. Much research was a single case study or a series of cases with the definition of success drawn post hoc as an inference from the study cases (e.g., Foust, 2009; Jenkins, 2004).

Because research is sparse, there is no conclusive evidence regarding links between board processes and organizational performance. Far from drawing any conclusions, scholars point to a complex and indirect relationship between board decision-making processes and organizational results (Forbes & Milliken, 1999). Ahrens and Khalifa (2013) described governance processes research as a "black box" and concluded that little is known about "the key processes that can make corporate governance effective" (p. 5).

Carver (1990) was the first to propose a framework of governance that can help a board define the distinct and separate roles of governance and management called the Policy Governance model. Carver's work stimulated a good deal of discussion and writing on governance approaches and processes. As Policy Governance practitioners and leaders deepened and matured in their experience and understanding, it became clearer that effectiveness research concerning Policy Governance would need to be based, a priori, on a theory of board governance. Considering the fact that Policy Governance is fundamentally a theory of board governance that promotes clarity or organizational purpose (through Ends Policy direction) and owner-informed accountability, it is insufficient to evaluate its effectiveness as a set of "best practices" because Policy Governance was not created as a set of "best practices". The theory-based approach resulted in a model that was based on an intentionally designed system of interdependent principles (and their derivative processes or practices) that, when used together, resulted in effective board governance as so conceived. Unlike most approaches that seek good governance, Policy Governance was not created as a set of "best practices". Hence, any effectiveness research regarding a theory-based approach must evaluate the extent to which the model has been implemented as opposed to a critique of practices.

Therefore, the research questions important to Policy Governance are:

- 1) How well does the application of the system achieve the theoretical ideal of effective (and efficient) board governance?
- 2) What should be the indicators and scale of effective (and efficient) board governance?

GOVERN for IMPACT’s voluntary Demonstrated Impact Research Team envisioned eventually testing the degree of correlation between adherence to the Policy Governance processes/principles and measures of the resultant effectiveness of the board. However, the team realized it had insufficient information regarding the target subjects (boards practicing Policy Governance to one degree or another), their view of the model standards for measurement of success, their implementation journey of constraints and facilitators, and of finding a way to measure the degree of implementation in order to evaluate any correlative improvement in governance effectiveness.

Therefore, what is presented here are the results of a pre-study familiarization survey of selected boards conceived and designed to lead to a better elucidation of means measures and practitioners’ view of possible measures of governance success. In short, we are establishing baseline markers against which the effectiveness of the Policy Governance model can be evaluated. Our team sought answers to five specific questions:

- 1) What trigger(s) led to a decision to pursue Policy Governance?
- 2) What were the major milestones of their implementation journey and what did subjects learn during the implementation process?
- 3) What were sustaining factors for them?
- 4) What challenges did they encounter during implementation?
- 5) What indicators of the governance impact did they think occurred?

From this study, as mentioned earlier, the team hopes to derive a better-informed design for subsequent correlation studies – establishing best measures of impact, setting practical scales to capture degrees of system implementation, and setting standards against which a governance system can be measured.

Results from this work will provide direction for next steps in pursuing this line of inquiry.

Literature Review

Keywords used in searching literature included: board, board of directors, board roles, board process, board decision-making, board effectiveness, board governance, governance, policy governance. Sources search included privately held books, Amazon books, Google scholar, Google scholar alerts on keywords, American Psychological Association PsycNET, Sage Research Methods Online, theses and dissertations databases, and grey literature (i.e., corporate publications).

In general, there is a lean body of work on boards of directors and the relationship between the board’s governing practices and organizational success (Charas & Perelli, 2013; Huse, Hoskisson, Zattoni, & Viganò, 2011; Leblanc & Schwartz, 2007; van Ees, van der Laan, & Postma, 2008). Although research on this topic is considered important, boards of directors are notoriously difficult to study. A board of directors is the legitimate authority and leadership for the organization (Carver, 2002b). Expectations of boards—and of those who serve on them—are often established by tradition and maintained by the status quo (Burnes, 2009). board governance processes are patched together by individual board members’ experiences and preferences. How board members’ decisions can affect organizational outcomes is not well understood.

Historically, authors and researchers tended toward understanding decision-making in public or elected boards, such as college or public school boards of trustees (Chait, Holland, & Taylor, 1996; Chait, Ryan, & Taylor, 2005; Herman & Renz, 1998, 2000; Smoley, 1999). Some dissertations and theses also focused on elected school boards (e.g., Foust, 2009; Woodward, 2006) or, simply, the experiences of the board members (Nobbie, 2001).

Few investigations have touched on board decision-making processes or attempted to study the impact of board governance on organizational performance. Fryday-Field (2013) asserted that boards need a new way of thinking in order to make governing decisions that drive the impact or the performance of the organization.

Brown (2005, p. 317) asserted, "...much work remains to be done to establish the nature and causal direction" of the relationship between governance behaviors and organizational success. Research suggests that effective boards coincide with effective organizational performance (e.g., Herman & Renz, 1998; Herman & Renz, 2000; Hodge & Piccolo, 2011), yet the relationship is not well understood. Specialized knowledge of board development, practices, and behaviors can begin to unravel whether or not board decision-making is a contributing factor to organizational effectiveness.

Policy Governance germinal literature on governing boards' performance stems from Carver's (1990) work to define the separate and distinct roles and responsibilities of boards versus management. Carver's work stimulated the discussion and literature on governance roles, responsibilities, systems, and processes. Some authors and researchers followed with versions of defining the separate and distinct roles and responsibilities of governing boards versus paid staff management (e.g., Brown & Chao, 2009; Chait, Holland, & Taylor, 1996; Herman & Heimovics, 1991; Houle (1997). However, Carver's work also explained how the board could effectively delegate administrative tasks to paid staff while maintaining the board of directors' legitimate authority. Carver's work is known as the Policy Governance system.

It should be noted that one of the major criticisms of Carver's (1990) Policy Governance system is the strict delineation of board and management roles.

Some critics posited that delineation leads to lack of board oversight (e.g., Hough, 2002).

However, other researchers noted the absence of specific delineation—or board roles that parallel management functions—can be fraught with risk (Maharaj, 2008). Another issue of too much board involvement in management can distract directors from their primary responsibility to the organization they govern (Mogensen, 2007). Too much board involvement in management can leave the directors open to personal liability (Zurich American Insurance Company, 2011). Appropriate board oversight or involvement in management functions remains controversial. As Carey (2015, para. 3) said, "The [Policy Governance] model, in an ideal governance environment, would be a governance utopia, but unfortunately, human being sometimes muck up ideal models."

Methodology

In 2014 GOVERN for IMPACT, then known as the International Policy Governance Association (IPGA) sought to engage as many as 20 Policy Governance practicing organizations representing a variety of countries and sectors within its global community in this pre-pilot research. Although some 25 organizations showed interest, a number of them experienced changes in leadership or for other reasons did not follow through to complete the required pre-questionnaire and consent form or were otherwise not available when it came time for the interview. Ultimately, the Demonstrated Impact Team was successful in conducting a total of 13 interviews with, by design, a diverse mix of organizations engaged in a variety of professional practices (e.g. education, banking, health care, social services, faith-based). These organizations are profiled in Figure 1 below.

To participate in the study, organizations were required to complete a pre-interview questionnaire and sign a consent form. They were advised in advance of the expectations of their involvement which requested that the Chief Executive Officer (CEO) and Board Chair (CGO) together participate in a two-hour video conference, telephone, or in-person interview with a member of the Demonstrated Impact Team.

Study participants were ensured in writing that the results of the interview would be aggregated with those of the other participating organizations, and that the resulting report would not directly attribute any of the data, or results of the analysis, to any specific organization.

Subject Recruitment

In June 2014, the Demonstrated Impact Team shared the study’s Conceptual Framework and information about how to participate in a plenary session at the Association’s Annual Conference in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Recruitment began in earnest in 2015 with members of the Demonstrated Impact Team, organization leadership, and Policy Governance consultants reaching out to their networks of practicing organizations inviting them to engage. The opportunity to participate in the study was also promoted to the general membership, to the organization’s broader contact list, and through presentations at subsequent annual conferences.

To engage, organizations were required to be using Policy Governance as their system of governance. The team’s goal was to recruit a mix of organizations in various stages of Policy Governance implementation (e.g. new to Policy Governance, practicing for several years, long-term practitioners).

All expressing interest were provided with an introductory letter and information packet along with an invitation to contact the Demonstrated Impact Team leader to ask questions or learn more about the planned research and the nature of their potential involvement. Profiles of the thirteen (13) research subject organizations are outlined below.

FIGURE 1
PROFILES OF SUBJECT ORGANIZATIONS

Organization	Organization Size By Employees	Organizational Sector	Years Practising
Avant https://avantministries.org/	201-500	Not-for-profit Charity Faith Based	>10-15
California Parks and Recreation Society www.cprs.org/home	6-15	Government (municipal)	>15
Christar www.christar.org	201-500	Not-for-profit	5-7
Community Access Unlimited, New Jersey www.caunj.org/	>750	Not-for-profit Charity	>15
HIV Scotland www.hiv.scot/	7	Not-for-profit Charity	5-7
LifeCare Ambulance https://lifecareems.org/	51-200	Not-for-profit Health	>15
Project Management Institute – San Francisco Bay Area Chapter pmissfbac.org/	51-200	For Profit Not-for-Profit	4-5

FIGURE 1 (continued)
PROFILES OF SUBJECT ORGANIZATIONS

Organization	Organization Size By Employees	Organizational Sector	Years Practising
Railroad and Industrial Federal Credit Union www.rifcu.org/	51-200	Not-for-Profit Financial Credit Union	>15
Red Deer College www.rdc.ab.ca/	>750	Not-for-Profit Education	>15
St. Mary Development Corporation www.stmarydevelopment.org/	15-20	Not-for-Profit Government Health Social Services Faith Based	8
Willy Street Coop willystreet.coop/	201-500	For Profit	>15
Wisconsin Youth Company Inc. www.wisconsin youthcompany.org/	51-200	Not-for-Profit Social Services	>15
World Impact www.worldimpact.org	~200	Faith Based	7

Consent Process

The information packet included a description of the research project’s purpose, participant eligibility requirements, and the specific commitment required. This commitment entailed reading the information packet, completing a pre-interview questionnaire and agreeing to make the Chief Executive Officer (CEO) and Board Chair available for a one and a half to two-hour interview with a member of the Demonstrated Impact Team.

In addition to submitting a Participant Agreement and Consent Form signed by an authorized representative of the organization, this commitment would also require approval to have the name of the organization published in the final report as a study participant, with the expressed understanding referred to above, that the interview data contributed and resulting analysis would be presented in the aggregate in such a way that the unique responses of individual organizations would not be readily identifiable to the reader.

Before the interview was conducted, research participants were asked to complete a pre-interview questionnaire entitled, “Creating a Profile of Board Implementation of Policy Governance.” The purpose of this preliminary data gathering was to assess the organization’s eligibility and create a baseline profile of its current Policy Governance practice.

The Participant Agreement form was also included in the information packet. This form further asserted that information about individual participating organizations would remain confidential and that all organizations engaging in the study would receive a copy of the resulting report.

Interviewer Training

In preparation for the interviews, the Demonstrated Impact Team developed an Interview Guide that detailed the specific questions to be asked consistently by all interviewers. The guide summarized the purpose of the interview which was to explore the unique “story” of the board and organization’s implementation of Policy Governance. The interview conversation was intended to result in a profile of the Policy Governance adoption, the extent to which Policy Governance had been implemented, the nature of the implementation process, and the criteria believed to be useful in assessing the extent to which this system of governance had been fully and implemented.

In 2014 and 2017, the team convened two virtual video conference sessions to reorient the interviews to research questions and review the guidelines and process for conducting the interviews.

Interviewers were advised to rely on the Guide as a script when explaining the purpose and context of the research and the interview process to their interviewees, and to reinforce expectations about the confidential nature and planned use of the resulting data.

The training addressed how the interviewers were to facilitate the discussions using an ‘appreciative inquiry’ approach that maintained objectivity and posed questions in a neutral manner, while also providing the opportunity for interviewees to share whatever they deemed relevant. Interviewers were encouraged to probe with follow-up questions that clarify the respondents’ intent, as needed, and learn as much as possible about each organization’s individual journey.

Since most of the interviewers had worked with organizations engaged in the study (either as board members, CEO, or consultant) care was taken to ensure that the interview assignments were “arms-length,” and that no interviewer was assigned to an organization with which they had a prior relationship. As the interviews would be recorded, interviewers were instructed to obtain permission from all participants before recording the discussion for later transcription or reference.

Data Collection Methodology

The interviews were conducted via video conference, telephone, or in person with a pair of individuals, typically comprised of board chair, or other engaged member of the board, and the CEO. After brief introductions and providing the interviewees with the background information detailed above, the interviewers facilitated a somewhat informal, highly interactive conversation using the interview questions as a guide.

Interviewees were informed that they would be asked a series of structured questions but were also encouraged to share any ideas they thought relevant. As all participants gave their consent for the discussion to be recorded, the interviews had the ability to subsequently produce a written transcript and/or refer to the recording when consolidating their notes and summarizing the data.

Post interview, interviewers worked from their notes, audio recordings, and/or verbatim transcripts of the recordings to produce a focused summary of the results of each interview. The resulting data were then populated into the single, comprehensive database developed by the team, organized in a format that mirrored the research questions, with each organization clearly identified.

Data Analysis and Findings

Summary of Findings

Each of the specific research pre-pilot qualitative research questions were combined with relevant questions in order to create seven (7) major query areas. The key findings report by subject organizations are listed below for each query area. While query areas stand alone, the research does demonstrate that several major themes cross over these query areas.

Query 1

- How did you learn about the system of Policy Governance?

There were a variety of ways that subject organizations became aware of Policy Governance as a governance approach. These included reading related books, attending introductory workshops, Policy Governance-experienced board member or CEO recommendations, and governance consultants'/coaches suggestions.

While the source of information varied, organizations were either actively seeking to improve their board governance or were open to the suggestion that this was needed when it was presented to them. Some boards learned about the concept of Policy Governance from an 'umbrella' board with which they were associated.

One key finding was that for at least two of the organizations, the CEO final candidate indicated the importance of the board's adoption and use of Policy Governance as a criterion for these CEOs to consider taking the job.

Query 2

Why did the organization choose Policy Governance and what factors caused the decision to transition to Policy Governance?

A majority of organization interviewees had in some form, become dissatisfied with the board's style or practices of governance (or non-governance).

Indicators that were mentioned, often, were:

- Unhappiness with the way the board interacted or directed the CEO, especially, in one case, brought to the board's attention by a new CEO who had just come on-board and expressed frustration with inability to lead, given the board's style,

- Examples of dysfunction included the board being overly hands-on and too much time in operational detail, ED needing to run to the board for permission for operational decisions, which, in turn, led to delays in responsiveness, ambiguity between governance and operations, no priorities and the board un-focused, leading to poking into everything,
- One ED expressed the board "needed to lead as a board."
- ED and operations in crisis,
- Ethics concerns,
- Growth in the organization sensitizing the board to the need to improve governance,
- Shrinkage of service area having the same effect,
- Board recognized the old board process was broken.

Other stimulants included external influencers: the organization's funder recommending Policy Governance, a government external review severely critiquing board governance, the chair having learned about Policy Governance, frankly recommending Policy Governance, and the board's ED attending the Academy and bringing it back.

Factors leading to the selection of Policy Governance as the solution to the above were:

- Outright recommendations from external sources such as a university center, major funder (who paid for the training), and finding out from another organization who was using Policy Governance.
- In some cases, the CEO, or a board member, or a staff member recommended the board consider exploring and implementing Policy Governance as a possible answer to governance challenges.
- In some situations, the finalist CEO candidates made it a condition of accepting the appointment as CEO.

Query 3

How did your organization implement the Policy Governance Model?

The research study team asked a series of questions to better understand the various ways that organizations approached their implementation of the Policy Governance Model including:

- Was the implementation over a series of considered (or circumstantial) stages?
- Was the implementation facilitated by a third party or an insider (or combination)?
- What tools were used?
- Was there a leader or cheerleader?

Noted earlier was the fact that most of the subject organizations were prompted to consider Policy Governance by an outside party suggesting (strongly or weakly) that the board consider Policy Governance as a possible solution to the dissonance the board was experiencing around their governance. Insiders, such as the CEO, chair or a fellow board member brought it the board's attention.

The majority (9) of subject boards followed this advice and sought an expert, (including John Carver himself (2), to guide, facilitate, and train them to one degree or another (boards used different language for this process). Most outside coaches had been to the Policy Governance Academy by the Carvers. Another path was to send a board member or CEO to this Academy training, who then, in turn, trained the board. A small percentage of boards (2 out of 13) attempted to do it themselves (without outside guidance) by studying books such as Reinventing Your board by Miriam Carver and videos. Several mixed the support of external expert governance coaches/consultants with some self-work and learning. So, it is difficult to clearly divide approaches into distinct categories.

The individual on the board taking on the implementation leadership was distributed between the chair, a lead board member or the CEO with no clear predominant pattern, but generally falling to the most knowledgeable person in Policy Governance (and perhaps energy/enthusiasm). In three cases, the board let the consultant lead with no clear internal leader voiced.

Tools that boards used to supplement their learning included the Carver books, (which received mixed reviews, some liking and some not), the Policy Governance Playbook, videos, and the policy template when the time came.

The general pattern of implementation could be divided into:

- The board experiencing decision stages marked with board consideration and a decision to proceed versus,
- An up-front decision to proceed to implement as a continuous process, and
- A majority seemed to follow some kind of staged approach. The watershed process appears to be the policy blitz preceded, or as part of two-day training followed by consultation of external qualified Policy Governance coaches/consultants.

Query 4

How are you sustaining Policy Governance?

When asked to reflect upon how they were sustaining Policy Governance, a reference was made to board member succession, suggesting that when members who were not committed to Policy Governance left the board, they had been replaced by others who were willing to make that commitment.

This question also elicited several themes in relation to board process. These primarily focused on the implementation of Policy Governance as an ongoing process of continuous learning in which capacity is developed through lived experience. Specific strategies referenced by respondents as having been employed by their boards to help sustain Policy Governance included receiving support from trained coaches and consultants, and peer support from other boards engaged in the practice. Respondents also shared that they had conducted annual board retreats, attended trainings and conferences, and conducted regular Policy Governance “refreshers.” One organization specifically referred to the presence of an internal coach.

Query 5

What challenges have you experienced?

All respondents to this question listed challenges. A variety of challenges were mentioned that included everything from specific parts of the model to creating the right board culture.

Two related challenges mentioned consistently regarded the recruitment/buy-in and the steep learning curve of board members. These challenges were expressed as difficulties with recruiting board members with the mindset to succeed on a board using Policy Governance principles and integration of the principles. Policy Governance can be perceived to be challenging for new members to understand, some bring a personal agenda or don't feel their work experience is being valued, need future thinkers, and the difficult process of onboarding new board members to Policy Governance (onboarding new members can be overwhelming, hard to explain the abstract concepts to people new to the board), Policy Governance terms can be like a foreign language, continuous learning required).

An overarching comment was the difficulty in implementing all parts of Policy Governance when there is board turnover because of the time and effort required to get new members up to speed. Policy Governance is a completely different shift for many board members and the specific language and structure of the model creates challenges to implementation.

Challenges with implementation referred to all aspects of the model with a majority of subject organizations citing issues with Executive Limitations and monitoring, governance process and board dynamics, some citing issues with owner linkage and Ends issues.

Regarding executive limitations and monitoring there were challenges for executives in learning how to prepare reports and for board members to understand how reporting performance against policy (CEO interpretation) is good oversight/governance. It was also noted that it is hard for CEOs to write effective monitoring reports if the policy is poorly written.

Challenges involving the governance process and board dynamics included difficulties coming to consensus and accepting interpretations, understanding the principle of shared values, the time to create a comfortable environment, and the board willing to police itself. Finding the time to make the governance process work was cited as a challenge.

Challenges cited around Owner Linkage were uncertainty about how to do meaningful linkage, adapting to changing owners and understanding different ways to do linkage.

Comments such as “they quit coming because we were successful” referred to how linkage needs to change as the organization develops which is part of the challenge of engaging in meaningful linkage – it must change to continue to be meaningful.

The challenges around Ends were all in relation to getting it right (Ends vs. Executive Limitations, how to measure, how often to revise, focusing Ends throughout the organization).

In all areas cited from board recruitment to monitoring and developing a productive board culture the challenges refer to the continuous learning and the time required to implement and succeed with Policy Governance.

Query 6

What are the criteria for effective implementation?

Perhaps two of the most prominent themes emanating from the research data regarding what are believed to be the criteria for the effective implementation of Policy Governance and the nature of the implementation experience, including challenges faced, related to the long-term nature of the commitment required in order to be successful. Policy Governance was described as a system of governance quite different from the common practice of many other boards they had participated on and/or worked for in the past.

One organization referred to the process of implementation as a “steep learning curve.” Others spoke about the perceived complexity of the system and the need to select board members whose values and expectations are aligned with this process of governance. Other factors cited by respondents included the importance of building to a board culture that supports Policy Governance, as well as the challenges inherent in creating, implementing, monitoring, and refreshing Ends and linking with owners.

Strategies for effectively overcoming these challenges were also shared by the study participants. These included the engagement of coaches, consultants, and other facilitative support as well as attending the Carver Policy Governance Academy and other trainings. Some mention was also made about the value of board administrative liaisons and internal advocates.

When describing the benefits of their Policy Governance practice, two significant themes emerging from this study were the clarity between the role of the CEO and that of the board which resulted in greater overall accountability, with one respondent describing an experience in which the board had “moved from a reactionary to proactive” approach to governance.

The importance of practicing Policy Governance with fidelity to the model was also emphasized. A number of participants shared that their journey had been one of ongoing learning and continuous improvement, one that had become somewhat easier the longer they practiced with some board members self-selecting out along the way.

Query 7

What impact has Policy Governance had for your board/organization and the impact you have as an organization?

The interview process was designed to better understand benefits attributed to the implementation of Policy Governance. Seven questions with several being multi-part questions probed the impact Policy Governance had on the board or organization including what was most and least valued while practicing Policy Governance, additional benefits anticipated with continued implementation, level of benefit, and to what is the benefit attributed.

Two of the questions referred not to the organization's current practice but rather what the impacts would be if Policy Governance were successfully implemented. These questions further collected the respondents' beliefs about the benefits of Policy Governance.

All thirteen respondents directly or indirectly indicated some benefit to using Policy Governance. Ten of the respondents or 77% of those that responded to this question, said participation resulted in a 'strong' or a 'very strong' benefit to their organization. Respondents attributed the benefits to the principles and systematic nature of Policy Governance. It was indicated that the implementation of Policy Governance resulted in more focus on purpose and the clarity of roles. Additionally, the resulting board culture and practice allows for higher levels of vision and leadership from the board. A small number of respondents expressed that it is difficult to know the level of benefit. They did report some real progress as an organization but noting it was not as fast as they would like, and it is difficult to know how much to attribute to governance.

When asked what they valued most about their experience practicing Policy Governance, respondents had a lot to say. The responses frequently referred to greater clarity:

- clarity of board leadership,
- clarity of board and CEO relationship and their distinct roles,
- clarity of board process expectations, and
- clarity of purpose.

In addition, accountability was increased. A number of responses mentioned an appropriate board culture including more engagement, discipline, and the development of thought leaders.

The clarity of roles was a benefit to both boards and CEOs which allowed both to focus on priorities and have aligned expectations of each other. Meaningful policies led to better monitoring reports and measures that increased accountability.

Implementing the model created more focus on the purpose of the organization. A reoccurring theme was that to reap the benefits of Policy Governance, discipline in comprehensive implementation of Policy Governance is needed.

Interviews indicated the primary basis for benefiting from Policy Governance was related to the additional clarity around governance and operational roles. Comments included that everyone knows their role, the board keeps itself in its proper role, and the clearly defined relationship with CEO is extremely positive. In addition, some respondents expressed the clarity of roles and focus on priorities has led to more organizational agility.

Most responses discussed the value of having a clearly defined governance process that details individual expectations and how the board holds themselves and the executive accountable. Policy Governance® provided a much better CEO/board relationship and enabled the board and CEO to effectively govern. Board members were more engaged, disciplined and had more civil dialogue that was appropriately focused (future-focused, strategic, and within appropriate framework).

Policy Governance increases board effectiveness by focusing discussions appropriately and the process of developing policies creates more buy-in for board members. Also, the value of ownership linkage was also expressed. Policy Governance has resulted in more engagement with owners and increased awareness of the need to engage various owners in a meaningful way.

Knowing that the organizations interviewed were at very different points in their implementation of Policy Governance, the research team also asked what additional benefits were anticipated after further implementation. Once again, the value of having a coherent structure that defines boundaries was mentioned by half of the organizations. It was expressed that if their practice of Policy Governance was improved that they expected to see stronger organizational performance. The value of Policy Governance in building better leadership especially thought leaders was discussed. The alignment of vision, mission, purpose and a stronger link to owners and community were benefits to be attained with further practice. There were strong expectations of how meaningful owner linkage could move the organization forward. There is solid agreement that implementation of Policy Governance is an evolutionary process which requires continuous learning.

This research project was designed to help determine how organizations measure success in order to be able to do further research correlating the degree of Policy Governance implementation with organizational impact.

Organizations were asked what successful Policy Governance implementation looks like and what are the most meaningful criteria for demonstrating successful use of Policy Governance. The answers to these questions further illuminate this query regarding the impact of Policy Governance.

All thirteen organizations responded to the question of what successful implementation looks like. The majority of the factors of success cited dealt with how well Policy Governance principles were put into practice such as:

- the clarity of and adherence to the board's role and the roles of board members.
- common understanding of principles,
- asking the right questions (future thinking); meaningful dialogue,
- understanding roles, commitment and trust between CEO and board,
- board setting the tone at the top culturally
- consistency, fidelity, and strength of practices
- the CEO's commitment and knowledge of Policy Governance

Most cited the commitment to a culture of continuous learning as vital to success.

Less than half the organizations answered the question regarding meaningful criteria to demonstrate successful use of Policy Governance. Responses focused on accountability and meaningful evidence of making a difference. Evidence of an engaged board that is knowledgeable about Policy Governance is also deemed important.

There was a better response rate to the question regarding what you would see in a board that had successfully implemented Policy Governance. Almost all respondents cited the impact on relationships (camaraderie, professionalism, appropriate, engaged, satisfying relationships between board, CEO, and owners). Half cited the alignment and achievement of Ends and the enhanced ability to serve the community and achieve strategic goals to make real change in the world. Another important theme was efficiency and the relationship of effectiveness to cost or the "at what cost" concept of ends development in Policy Governance.

The final question related to this query was “what criteria does your board use to measure the impact of Policy Governance”. Seventy-five percent of the respondents answered this question with three measures cited most often:

- The right Ends are understood and used throughout the organization.
- Organizational success as defined by the organization. (Ends achievement.)
- Accountability and good oversight.

Mentioned with less frequency was the idea that Policy Governance enhances structure, processes, and culture that allows for the hard, strategic conversations.

In summary, all organizations were able to identify the positive impact that Policy Governance has had on their organization. The principles of the model are credited with creating greater clarity of roles, clear boundaries and expectations, and increased accountability with a sharper focus on purpose.

The Policy Governance principles along with the discipline to implement the approach are credited with building effective board leaders and meaningful dialogue. The strengthening of appropriate and fostering meaningful relationships between the board and CEO and with owners was also stated as a clear benefit.

Conclusions/Key Themes and Learning

The data as outlined in Appendix 1 and as summarized by each specific query in the section on Summary of Findings, demonstrated a number of common themes across the organizations that had implemented Policy Governance. There was a range of the extent to which the various subject organizations had experienced these phenomena likely based to a degree on their implementation approach and the length of time they had been using Policy Governance. There will be further review of these factors in the next step of this analysis.

The overall purpose of the pre-pilot study is to determine what factors need to be assessed when evaluating the extent to which an organization has fully and effectively implemented Policy Governance.

The specific query areas under this approach include:

- Query 1 - How did you learn about Policy Governance?
- Query 2 - Why did the organization choose Policy Governance and what factors caused the decision to transition to Policy Governance?
- Query 3 - How did your organization implement Policy Governance?
- Query 4 - How are you sustaining the Policy Governance?
- Query 5 - What challenges have you experienced?
- Query 6 - What are the criteria for effective implementation?
- Query 7 - What impact has Policy Governance had for your board/organization and the impact you have as an organization?

The data yielded some strong overall themes from these questions. These themes fall into four categories including:

- What drove the change to Policy Governance?
- Internal Impacts of Policy Governance
- External Impacts of Policy Governance
- Steep Learning Curve that is Worth the Investment

Overall Theme 1 – What Motivated the Change to Policy Governance?

The key idea that the subject boards spoke to was the fact that their boards were searching for a better way to govern. They experienced cognitive dissonance in that they knew effective governance was needed; yet they also believed that how their organizations were governing was not effective, or not as effective as it should be, or in some cases, board governance was actually getting in the way of the organization success.

boards ranged in their board governance discomfort from dissatisfaction with their current board governance results, dynamics, and motivation to engage Policy Governance to absolute crisis in the organization and at a board governance level.

Overall Theme 2 – Internal Impacts of Policy Governance

Participating organizations reported that there were a number of internal effects that they considered valuable and which enhanced their governance including:

Greater Role Differentiation and Role Clarity of Board and CEO, and Beyond

Board, CEO, owners, beneficiaries/customers, staff, and stakeholder roles are reported to be more clear under Policy Governance®.

This clarity of roles resulted in:

- Enhanced coordination between board and CEO,
- Better communication,
- Improved function within the board distinct and unique roles – boards and CEO stayed in their lanes more effectively,
- An enhanced board/CEO relationship.
- Role clarity also resulted in greater accountability for CEOs to boards and boards to owners.

Improved Board Leadership and Culture

Subject boards reported that they experienced improvements in the board's culture and the connection, teamwork, and transparency at board level. As the board's values were clarified and the board's cultural behaviours advanced the engagement of board members improved. Participants described their board members as very engaged.

Improved Organizational Functioning

Subject organizations also reported that they developed and experienced more organizational efficiency, effectiveness, and accountability.

In general, subject boards reported that they believed they were more effective as boards and are doing a better and more intentional job of governing with the use of the Policy Governance model. boards also noted they felt better about their board governance and the time they were investing to govern. boards noted they focused more on purpose and outcomes to be achieved. boards believed they were adding more value to their organizations and also to what their organizations were achieving. While this is a pre-pilot study and hence the exploratory sample size is small, these early findings point to this approach to governance as being connected to organizational resiliency and sustainability. This will need to be further studied.

Overall Theme 3 – External Impacts of Policy Governance

Clarity of Purpose

Participant boards reported that Policy Governance provided principles that pressed the board to become more focused on building clarity of purpose of the organization. They reported that the building of Ends policy direction, the need to scan the environment to inform Ends Policy creation, the CEO interpretation of those directions in observable and measurable terms, and the monitoring of results for achievement all contributed to more focus on organizational purpose and impact.

Boards further reported that generative and strategic thinking at the board level was enhanced through their pursuit of Ends thinking.

Stronger Connection to Owners

In order to inform their Ends thinking (what outcomes, for what people, at what priority or worth), boards reported they did build stronger connections to their community(ies) of owners and that they developed more meaningful dialogue and links with their organization owners.

Overall Theme 4 – Steep Learning Curve That is Worth the Investment

Continuous Learning and Improvement of board Governance

All participant boards reported that the adoption of Policy Governance required disciplined learning and investment of time and energy not only to learn Policy Governance thinking but also to learn methods and tools to support implementation. The learning curve was repeatedly reported as a steep curve particularly while initially adopting the approach.

Boards also reported that they continue to learn and Policy Governance by its nature requires continuous learning and quality improvement of governance.

Discipline and Perseverance

All boards reported that implementation of Policy Governance requires discipline on the part of both the board and the CEO. They also all reported that that discipline and hard work does yield improved board governance.

Resources and Professional Support

Participant boards reported that the discipline of board governance does require training, learning, coaching, resource materials, sharing/benchmarking ideas, and qualified external coaching/consultation. Like any discipline, there is both a body of knowledge that needs to be learned and skills and judgment that need to be developed.

Most boards reported that this development is significantly faster, more focused, and therefore more impactful once they engaged qualified support and materials.

Internal Champions

Participant organizations also reported that they found if there were one or more internal champions who held the board's feet to the fire to stay on track, they made more progress.

Internal champions did not need to be board governance experts but they did need to continue to support and challenge the board to stay focused on its transition through Policy Governance.

Consistent Ongoing Use and Discipline of this Flexible Approach

Participant organizations consistently reported their recognized need to ensure consistent fidelity in use of the model and continuous improvement in its use.

Overall, all boards reported that the practice of Policy Governance improved not only their board governance but their organization's focus, effectiveness, and impact also. Ten (10) out of thirteen (13) organizations reported the impact was significant or very significant. All boards reported it was worth the learning and transition to Policy Governance.

Limitations of Research

Some limitations need to be noted regarding this study. First, this study was a pre-pilot study with a small sample size and by pre-pilot design included only organizations that implemented Policy Governance. Future studies could look to investigating multiple systems of governance. Second, researcher bias is possible due to the sampling method. Convenience sampling through an open call for participants accessed from sources which were in some cases known to the researchers.

Independent interviews were used to minimize this bias.

Sampling selection bias could have influenced the findings. Because of the pre-pilot sample size limitations, the results lack generalizability. Future studies should consider random sampling. Third, it was not possible to retype the data to enable a truly blind review of participants' responses. Thus, there is a chance that knowing the participants' identities could influence researchers in analyzing the data. Coding blind could be useful in futures studies.

Insights into Future Research

GOVERN for IMPACT's dedication to the study of Policy Governance stems from our assessment that, contrary to a 'best practices' approach, Policy Governance is, rather, a comprehensive and holistic governance model grounded in a distinct set of clearly defined principles.

We are driven by the assumption that those who sit on boards do so because they desire to share in creating a better future for others, i.e., that their organization is effective in the lives of its beneficiaries. They also, of course, seek more immediately gratifying effects such as a deeper sense of purpose, improved role clarity between board and CEO, and more impactful and risk-prudent organizational performance. In the longer term, they seek stronger connection to community and greater accountability for results. We also recognize that some seek governance excellence as an economic strategy to achieve maximum financial return. This study represents an early attempt to understand whether, and the extent to which, Policy Governance offers tools the world can learn about the potential value of rigorous governance practice guided by a holistic set of governing principles such as those used in Policy Governance.

Recall, our primary purpose conducting this pre-pilot research was to explore what leads to and best characterizes effective Policy Governance board practice. This learning could then inform an agenda for future research, whether conducted by GOVERN for IMPACT or other researchers, to deepen our understanding of the principles and practices of Policy Governance, and the extent to which their consistent application over time affects the organization's capacity to produce valued results in a manner that is both ethical and prudent.

The results of our present research point to a number of important questions worthy of further inquiry suggesting what an expanded research agenda, both short term and long term, might look like. Among these proximate questions is that which the pre-pilot originally sought to amplify, namely, "What are the essential characteristics and practices of an effective Policy Governance practicing board and how can they be measured?"

Other questions of central importance which have been illuminated by this preliminary research include:

- What drives boards to consider, and to adopt, Policy Governance as a model of governance?
- What are the characteristics of an effective member of a board using Policy Governance, and how does knowing these characteristics affect the way in which board members are recruited?
- How does Policy Governance implementation affect the performance of the board and the organization, including its culture and productivity?
- What changes result from greater versus lesser differentiation and coordination of roles between the board and CEO?

- Do organizations with boards that effectively define and monitor results and risk mitigation demonstrate greater achievement than those who do not?
- How might the return on investment in Policy Governance implementation be measured over time?

These and many other questions of interest could best be explored in stages or concentric rings of research. We could begin by taking a deeper dive into what was learned through this study by pursuing questions such as those listed above. The next phase would then work outward to address larger, more strategic questions about governance such as, "Given the rapid pace of change and complexity of challenges the world is facing, what will the future of effective governance look like?" and "What unique characteristics of future leaders will be needed to ensure effective governance?"

It is just such questions that drive home the moral imperative for further research, about what constitutes excellence in governance. Ultimately, it is our hope that boards of all types will one day benefit from knowledge about theories and practices of governance with the same depth as our present knowledge about theories and practices of organizational management. ■

Acknowledgements

This article has been independently peer-reviewed by three of four members of the GOVERN for IMPACT Consistency Team:

- Richard Stringham
- Linda Stier
- Eric Craymer

Their comments and analysis have been incorporated and were very much appreciated by the Demonstrated Impact Research Team. The article was also edited by Tim Kurth.

The Demonstrated Impact Research Team would like to thank early team members who are no longer with the research group but who contributed to the thinking and/or data collection of this pre-pilot project, including:

- Dolores Blueford
- John Bruce
- Gwen DuBois-Wing

In addition, the GOVERN for IMPACT Demonstrated Impact Team would like to thank all members of the team who have contributed over the past five years:

- Sabirah Arfin
- Roger Ballard
- Dan Jorgenson
- Kathy Lebby
- Randy Swing
- Richard Taylor

Appendix 1 – Findings and Data Analysis

(Click the link to view the more detailed records of the input from the subject boards).

Reference List

Ahrens, T., & Khalifa, R. (2013). Researching the lived experience of corporate governance. Qualitative Research in Accounting & Management, 10(1), 4-30. doi:10.1108/11766091311316176

Brown, W. A. (2005). Exploring the association between board and organizational performance in nonprofit organizations. Nonprofit Management & Leadership, 15(3), 317-339. doi:10.1002/nmi.71

Brown, W. A., & Chao, G. (2009). Exploring the key roles for nonprofit boards. Nonprofit and Voluntary Sector Quarterly, 39(3), 536-546. doi:10.1177/0899764009334588

Burnes, B. (2009). Reflections: Ethics and organizational change - time for a return to Lewinian values. Journal of Change Management, 9(4), 359-381. doi:10.1080/14697010903360558

Carey, S. C. (2015). Ask the experts. Bottom Line Briefing: Business Intelligence for the Association Executive. Retrieved from http://www.infoinc.com/blb/getAsk_Experts_nl.cfm?abid=251FAF151908&sid=241FA4

Carver, J. (1990). boards that make a difference: A new design for leadership in nonprofit and public organizations. San Francisco, CA: Jossey-Bass.

Carver, J. (2002a). Corporate boards that create value: Governing company performance from the boardroom. San Francisco, CA: Jossey-Bass.

Carver, J. (2002b). John Carver on board leadership: Selected writings from the creator of the world's most provocative and systematic governance model. San Francisco, CA: Jossey-Bass.

Chait, R. P., Holland, T. P., & Taylor, B. E. (1996). Improving the performance of governing boards. Phoenix, AZ: The Oryx Press.

Chait, R. P., Ryan, W. P., & Taylor, B. E. (2005). Governance as leadership-Reframing the work of nonprofit boards. Hoboken, NJ: John Wiley & Sons Inc.

Charas, S., & Perelli, S. (2013). Threats to board stability: Understanding SME director behavior. International Journal of Disclosure and Governance, 10(2), 175-191. doi:10.1057/jdg.2013.10

Forbes, D. P., & Milliken, F. J. (1999). Cognition and corporate governance: Understanding boards of directors as strategic decision-making groups. Academy of Management Review, 24(3), 489-505. doi:10.5465/AMR.1999.2202133

Foust, K. (2009). Public school board governance practices in western Pennsylvania and AYP scores; is there a relationship? (Doctoral dissertation). Retrieved from ProQuest Dissertations and Theses. (Order No. 3372766)

Fryday-Field, K. (2013). You Can't Create Ends Without a Different Kind of Thinking-Part I. board Leadership, 126 (Mar-Apr), <https://doi.org/10.1002/bl.20020>

Fryday-Field, K. (2013). You Can't Create Ends Without a Different Kind of Thinking-Part II. board Leadership, 127 (May-June) <https://doi.org/10.1002/bl.20021>

Herman, R. D., & Heimovics, R. D. (1991) Executive leadership in nonprofit organizations: New strategies for shaping executive-board dynamics. San Francisco, CA: Jossey-Bass.

Herman, R. D., & Renz, D. O. (1998). Nonprofit organizational effectiveness: Contrasts between especially effective and less effective organizations. Nonprofit Management & Leadership, 9(1), 23-38. doi:10.1002/nml.v9:1

Herman, R. D., & Renz, D. O. (2000). board practices of especially effective and less effective local nonprofit organization. American Review of Public Administration, 2000(30), 146-160. doi:10.1177/02750740022064605

Hodge, M. M., & Piccolo, R. F. (2011). Nonprofit board effectiveness, private philanthropy, and financial vulnerability. Public Administration Quarterly, 35(4), 520-550. <https://www.jstor.org/stable/23209327>

Hough, A. (2002). The Policy Governance® model: A critical examination [Working paper]. Retrieved from Centre of Philanthropy and Nonprofit Studies Queensland University of Technology website <http://eprints.qut.edu.au/12029/>.

Houle, C. O. (1997). Governing boards: Their nature and nurture. San Francisco, CA: Jossey-Bass.

Huse, M., Hoskisson, R., Zattoni, A., & Viganò, R. (2011). New perspectives on board research: Changing the research agenda. Journal of Management & Governance, 15(1), 5-28. <http://dx.doi.org/10.1007/s10997-009-9122-9>

Jenkins, P. M. (2004). A case study of the development of the board of directors of a nonprofit organization, 1970--2003. Retrieved from ProQuest Dissertations and Theses. (Order No. 3171838, Pepperdine University).

Leblanc, R. W., & Schwartz, M. S. (2007). The black box of board process: Gaining access to a difficult subject. Corporate Governance, 15(5), 843-851. doi:10.1111/j.1467-8683.2007.00617.x

Maharaj, R. (2008). Corporate governance, groupthink and bullies in the boardroom. International Journal of Disclosure and Governance, 5(1), 68-92. doi: 10.1057/palgrave.jdg.2050074

Mogensen, S. (2007). The ups and downs of hierarchy: How Policy Governance® resolves the common complaints: Part I. board Leadership, 91(May-June), 4, 8.

Nobbie, P. D. (2001). Testing the implementation, board performance, and organizational effectiveness of the Policy Governance® model in nonprofit boards of directors (Unpublished doctoral dissertation). University of Georgia, Athens.

Smoley, E. R., Jr. (1999). Effective school boards: Strategies for improving board performance. San Francisco, CA: Jossey-Bass.

van Ees, H., van der Laan, G., & Postman, T. J. B. M. (2008). Effective board behavior in The Netherlands. European Management Journal, 26(2), 84-93. <http://dx.doi.org/10.1016/j.emj.2008.01.002>

Woodward, C. L. (2006). Effectiveness of governance boards in traditional public school districts and community public schools in Ohio (Doctoral dissertation). Retrieved from ProQuest Dissertations and Theses. (Order No. 3221025)

Zurich American Insurance Company. (2011). The liability exposures of nonprofit board members: Are the directors & officers of your organization protected? [White paper]. Retrieved from <http://hpd.zurichna.com/Whitepaper/Zurich-Liability-Exposures-Nonprofit.pdf>

ABSTRACT

EDITOR'S NOTE: The International Journal for Governance Excellence welcomes a variety of types of articles. The article below is an abstract of a coming article.

Future Focused School Boards Impact Student Achievement

Bergen, Andrew
Senior Consultant, The Governance Coach

Primary and secondary education is an important and impactful industry. John Carver stated, “Preparing people for contributing, satisfying adulthood is worth the most effective governance a board can achieve.” (Carver, John, “Remaking Governance.” American School board Journal, 187:3, March 2000.

board focus on the future is of critical importance to student achievement. Studies indicate school boards that move away from operational conversations toward future, strategic directions have a direct and positive impact on student outcomes. “The overall conclusion is that traditional school boards can and do influence academic outcomes, meaning, improving school board governance is a legitimate approach to improving academic achievement.” (Ford, Michael, “The Impact of School Board Governance on Academic Achievement in Diverse States.” UWM Digital Commons, August, 2013” <https://dc.uwm.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=1334&context=etd>)

Neglecting to define the future results expected for students is a moral and ethical failure of boards. A governance system like Policy Governance® is necessary to keep boards focused on the future rather than becoming mired in the present and the past.

The upcoming journal article will further examine

- The pitfalls associated with a faulty view of the board’s position relative to the ownership.
- The importance of future-focused board work
- A proposed way forward so boards engage in more effective future oriented governance. ■

Andrew Bergen, MA, GSP, ACC
Senior Consultant, The Governance Coach

- Personally trained by John and Miriam Carver at the Policy Governance® Academy, 2009
- Consultant in Policy Governance® for more than 10 years. Have consulted with a large variety of boards including 19 school boards in three countries
- Co-author of two books focused on Policy Governance® in education

OPINION

EDITOR'S NOTE: The International Journal for Governance Excellence welcomes a variety of types of articles. One type is "opinion articles", where for example, authors can share lessons learned articles. The article below is an opinion article.

19 Years of Lessons Learned by a Policy Governance Board

Maloney, Rick

Board President, University Place School District

Since 2001 the University Place School board has discovered, explored, prepared for, launched, and sustained a system of policy governance.

We have grown as a board while making, correcting, and reflecting on mistakes, then periodically revisiting, relearning, and recommitting to foundational policy governance principles.

Lessons we have found helpful include:

- 1 Be wary of assumptions.
- 2 Change the board mindset.
- 3 It's all or nothing.
- 4 Trust the process.
- 5 Allow enough time.
- 6 Put in the work.

7 Never forget board capacity.

8 Grow institutional memory.

1 Be wary of assumptions

Innovation is good. Innovation and change offer a hope of better things on the horizon. But investing in one innovation after another can be counter-productive. Initiatives require time to learn and implement new practices. If we keep changing, staff tend to shut down or ignore direction, thinking "This too shall pass."

Lesson: Be open to new ideas, but don't fall in love with innovation for its own sake.

Consensus is best. I used to think consensus was necessary for the best decisions, because consensus ensures all voices are heard, and it protects against the tyranny of the majority.

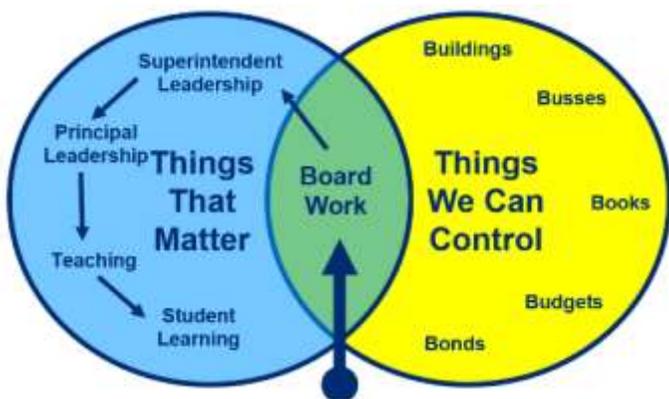

Board members who consistently subvert board effectiveness are empowered by consensus. We should never grant any individual a veto over the will of the majority. That just replaces tyranny of the majority with tyranny of the minority.

Lesson: If desire for consensus leads to inaction, be willing to use Robert’s Rules of Order: Call the question, take a vote, exercise majority voice, and move on.

2 Change board mindset

I used to think the key policy governance difference is our approach to board work. It certainly does change our approach, but before we can effectively use this new approach, we have to change our mindset about the nature and purpose of the board’s job.

There is a difference between what we can control and what matters. Think of all the things the board can control. In education they include operational matters that some call “Killer B’s” – buildings, buses, books, budget, bonds, etc. They all fall within the board’s authority. But how much do they matter?

What ultimately matters is student learning. Next is teaching, which directly impacts learning. On a third level, still important, is management, which sets system wide conditions for teaching and learning.

Most remote from the classroom is governance. The work of educators essential, but for a board what it controls that really matters is its own performance.

Lesson: The board must first attend to its own performance as a board, continuously creating three job products:

- Linkage/board learning
- Reviewing/updating policy; and
- Monitoring/self-monitoring

3 It’s all or nothing

Carver advises us to adopt policy governance as a coherent system rather than picking and choosing what suits our fancy.

Too little board control? Impose limits on the executive. I used to think that board-CEO relationship policies drew a clear enough line between the board (decides on ends) and the CEO (decides on means). Then I observed CEOs of newly PG-trained boards insist that staff means decisions by definition belong to the CEO, without board involvement.

Lesson: The board involves itself in a model-consistent way when it defines roles and authority in its board-CEO relationship policies and fine-tunes guidance for each staff means area in executive limits, then monitors those limits for compliance.

Too much board control? Self-impose board restraint. I used to think that executive limits defined the line between what a board directs and what its CEO controls. Then I saw a board monitor staff means so relentlessly that it undermined the CEO’s freedom to interpret policy. This board obsessed, not about ends, but about means, constantly redrawing the line. It in effect used monitoring as a way to (micro)manage, failing to monitor ends for several years.

Lesson: The line between board and CEO decision-making requires not only carefully writing policies, but adhering to those policies while monitoring performance.

4 Trust the process

I used to think that routines offer the kind of foolish consistency that Ralph Waldo Emerson considered the hobgoblin of little minds. But we must distinguish foolish consistency from that which is wise. Intentional habits, carefully developed, reflect the wisdom of a disciplined mind. As Policy Governance boards we have a process we can trust to ensure wise consistency.

Lesson: Our monitoring process is not only an instrument of accountability, it also serves as an agent of change, improving board practice even while working on organizational performance. Rigorously monitoring, then requiring or making small, seemingly insignificant tweaks in response to monitoring reinforces the value of continuously “becoming a better board.”

5 Allow enough time

One common feature of many conference presentations is that they are often a celebration of “launch” and a premature declaration of success rather than evidence-based reports with measurable results. We now realize that our early declarations of success (in 2004-2005) were premature.

Our preparation for PG was slow – it took us two years – but that slow pace assured full engagement of all board members and added to our collective commitment when we finally launched.

Angela Duckworth, in her influential book “Grit” cautions that enthusiasm is commonplace, but what counts is what endures.

Lesson: We need to allow time for policy governance to achieve results.

- It might take a classroom teacher 1-2 years for new teaching strategies to positively impact student learning.
- For principals it may take 2-3 years after taking charge.
- For superintendents, it may take 4-5 years for system wide impact.
- And for boards, I now think it takes 5-10 years.

6 Put in the work

I used to think that the Policy Governance process, once the model is in place, practically runs itself. Inventor and TV pitchman

Ron Popeil sold his Showtime Rotisserie with the claim that you can just “Set it, and forget it!”. Board work is one of many endeavours that cannot be effectively done by just setting it (our board routines) and forgetting it. We must commit to the ongoing hard work of governing if we are to be effective.

To avoid complacency, we must periodically return to first principles, renewing our commitment to the meaningful work we originally set out to do.

Lesson: Hard work, renewal and recommitment are necessary to keep Policy Governance working the way it should.

7 Never forget board capacity

Governing capacity must be nurtured to ensure continuous board growth through self-monitoring, development of board discipline, and the occasional “deep dive” to ensure optimal board capacity for the future.

Upon launch we began a habit of evaluating every meeting, regularly reminding ourselves of our protocols. Our final agenda item, before announcements, is meeting assessment, which takes only one or two minutes to review board performance during the meeting. We rotate this responsibility among board members, one member using an evaluation checklist to critique how the meeting went.

For our board, the responsibility to enforce protocols has evolved. At first relying on the board chair to fulfill an enforcement role sometimes called the Carver Cop, we realized that any board member could and should remind colleagues of their commitments.

Occasionally conducting a separate in-depth review or deep dive into the 10 principles, intentionally inventorying relevant artifacts and board behaviors, helps us to take stock and renew our model consistency in a more intentional way.

Our board did this in 2015 using the Model Consistency Framework developed by GOVERN for IMPACT (then-IPGA) for board self-assessment.

Lesson: We should conduct a similar “deep dive” every 3-5 years, which happens to be the average tenure of a school board member.

8 Grow institutional memory

Santayana warned that “those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it.” Developing and growing institutional memory helps us avoid repeatable mistakes and capitalize on learning from experience. Some limitations on institutional memory:

- When the sum total of a board’s memory depends on the personal memory of individual members, every time a new member joins it the board’s memory is diminished.
- Memory loss is a natural human process that occurs over time.
- A process that gets in the way of learning that lasts is sometimes referred to as amnesia, particularly when accuracy is affected by personal interest.
- The board should not become over-dependent on its most senior members with regard to institutional memory.

Institutional memory goes beyond the sum total of individual board member memory, but it must be created and maintained. Because policy governance boards document in writing all directions to staff, and because policy governance boards document their monitoring decisions about progress toward Ends and compliance with means policy, they are more likely to grow and sustain institutional memory.

Lesson: Documentation supports institutional memory.

“The Journey Never Ends.”

Our journey toward governance effectiveness never really ends. Rather than a fixed ending, we should recognize that the end state is ongoing board development, continuous improvement in our performance of the task of governing, and consequently the organization’s continuous improvement in performance. I used to think we could get there with a lot of work. Now I think we will never get “there” but are on a continuous journey pursuing board effectiveness that leads to organizational effectiveness. ■

Rick Maloney, EdD has twenty-one years of experience as a local school board member, serving eight terms as board president and nine years as a director of his state school boards’ association. He lectures at the University of Washington, Tacoma, and is a board consultant and author on governance.

HOLD THE DATE AND JOIN US AT

GOVERN for IMPACT’s
Virtual 2021 Annual Conference
"Values to Impact Through Transformational Board Governance"

Thu, June 17 to Sat, June 19

www.governforimpact.org

GOVERN for IMPACT Advanced Practice Forums

Advanced Practice Forums are online education and dialogue 3 hour sessions designed to advance knowledge, skills, and wisdom of people dedicated to governance excellence. These forums are open to people with advanced governance knowledge and experience including GSP Fellows, PGP grads, Carver Academy participants, governance Masters or PhD level education training, experienced governance practitioners, and consultants. An advanced level of Policy Governance® knowledge is a strong asset for those participating in these forums.

These dynamic, interactive sessions are generally run from 11:00-2:00 p.m. Eastern Time. These sessions include advanced thinking in the area of Policy Governance and also other governance approaches. We also study other disciplines which are complimentary and useful in governance excellence implementation (e.g. appreciative inquiry, critical conversations, systems thinking, theory of change, logic models, etc.).

Don’t miss out, add the 2021 dates to your calendar now! Topics to be announced shortly.

2021 Schedule

- May 11, 2021
- September 21, 2021
- November 23, 2021

OPINION

EDITOR'S NOTE: The International Journal for Governance Excellence welcomes a variety of types of articles. The article below is an opinion article.

To explore the Policy Governance® Principle on ownership linkage please see the GOVERN for IMPACT White Paper on who makes up the Moral Ownership

A School Board Journey Through Ownership Linkage

Juech, Michael
Managing Partner, Dinamico Systems
in the Greater Chicago Area

Facilitating the implementation of Policy Governance® is a journey requiring a structured framework and consistent conversations reflecting the values of the ownership. There is importance in linkage meetings to connect with the owners of your organization. Understanding how to best implement these conversations within the organization is critical to guide the organization and the Ends.

This article will share information learned through the journey of one school district that implemented Policy Governance and the related importance of ownership linkages.

Throughout many organizations there are stakeholders and many use this terminology. When an organization looks to identify owners, there may be some stakeholder groups that meet the criteria of ownership. This is not to undervalue the importance of the stakeholder feedback but also understanding that the feedback may differ between owners and stakeholders. Owners will help to guide the development of the End policies and both groups will likely provide valuable feedback in order to grow and develop the organization.

In a school setting, this view of ownership is often a new way of thinking and can be a potential challenge to develop an understanding within the school community.

As public schools we are primarily funded by state and local taxes with a board made up of elected community members. Through the work with the board, we determined the way to best define our broader Ownership was the tax paying residents of the community. Within the Ownership, we broke down sub-categories that allowed for linkage meetings and conversations to take place and provide direction in the development of our Ends. The subgroups were parents, community and civic organizations, local businesses, local clergy, state and local government officials, and active older adults. Two stakeholder groups were also highlighted, students and employees. With the subgroups identified the development of Ownership Linkage Meetings began. The board was also interested in including stakeholder meetings so the title was expanded to Community Conversations. The Community Conversations were scheduled monthly and included a new group of owners or stakeholders with questions directed to the owners that support the development and creation of Ends Policies.

Some valuable lessons were learned through the development of the Community Conversations which then helped our communication strategies for future conversations.

Three big components were invitations, purpose, and commitment.

When developing the invitations, we looked to include a variety of individuals and did research to include a large group of initial contacts and invitations.

Being in a smaller community, it was an easier task and more manageable with the number of participants. Larger organizations may require a different format to best accommodate those owners interested in participating. The initial invitation was critical to explain the concept as it was new to the community. We also were able to focus on individuals that had previous relationships with the organization. Within that initial invitation it was key to communicate the purpose of the Community Conversation. Everyone likes to know the why and understand the value of the commitment to be engaged in a conversation. This was especially important in our contacts with local business officials. Finally, the explanation of the commitment. We knew the plan was to meet with each group for 60-90 minutes one time per year. Communicating that information took pressure off of our owners given they knew the conversation would be a minimal time commitment. Through the communication of these points, we were able to engage a variety of owners (and stakeholders) to help identify the Ends, as well as various goals and objectives. These connections also made for great educational relationships and building advocates within the community.

From the Community Conversation, we solicited a great deal of feedback. The board held a standing agenda item during each regular meeting to discuss and process the feedback. This allowed for consistent and timely discussion. board members who were unable to attend were updated and this provided an opportunity to publicly recognize individuals, organizations, and businesses that participated in the conversation.

As a board member or CEO looking to incorporate Ownership Linkages here are some ideas to consider to help you take the next step in connecting with your ownership:

- As a board work to identify your ownership, separate from your stakeholders, and develop a list of individuals or organizations that meet the criteria.
- Develop goals for the linkage meetings and be able to clearly communicate the message.
- Develop questions and discussion format for linkage meetings as well as a review process to use the information gained to inform board Ends Policies decisions.

- Send out invitations and target specific people within organizations, especially business partners.■

Michael Juech, EdD, serves as a school executive and has worked in various executive roles within different organizations. He completed his doctorate in Educational Leadership from Edgewood College focused on leadership in high functioning organizations. Mike brings a variety of experiences and works with boards to help maximize the positive impact to reach the organization's goals.

Every Board and organization is unique...

the consulting service they engage should be too!

469 Waterloos St., London, ON, N6B 2P4
519-439-7503

www.meridianedgeconsulting.com

Why Boards Choose to Work with the Meridian Consulting Team

- Professional, inspiring, dynamic, ethical, and flexible consultants.
- Exceptional results achieved.
- Generative Thinking and Strategic Direction Facilitation.
- Organizational Metrics, Performance Frameworks.
- Policy Governance® Design, Implementation, Coaching, Evaluation – including online training.

PURPOSE AND INTEGRITY IN BOARD LEADERSHIP

Caroline Oliver Fund for a New Vision

In memory of our late CEO Caroline Oliver, who devoted the last years of her life to advancing excellence in governance, GOVERN for IMPACT established this fund in 2018. As CEO, Caroline and the GOVERN board of Directors galvanized our community around the vision in which boards commonly engage in principled, owner accountable governance in service to our organizations, communities, and the world.

The inspiration lives on.

- Enhancing the Policy Governance Proficiency Program (PGP) with an expanded curriculum, robust meeting platform, and new multimedia learning materials
 - Publishing the results of pre-pilot research exploring the difference that the practice of Policy Governance® has made to a diverse mix of organizations and their communities.
 - Innovative programs preparing applied education and learning for boards, board members, and board coaches to enhance their effectiveness.
 - Engaging and develop young professionals' governance knowledge and skills with education scholarships – the future of our boards and organizations are in this next generation's hands and we welcome and encourage their engagement.
- Advocating to raise the profile of governance excellence in our public discourse through hosting public conversations about critical issues to be widely publicized and published in prominent places
 - Convening noted futurists and critical thinkers, exploring what governance of the future will look like and what governing leaders will need to be successful.

Every gift counts!

Please consider supporting growing knowledge and practices of effective governance through a donation to GOVERN for IMPACT.

CLICK HERE TO DONATE

“Like pebbles in a pond, expressing our shared commitment to excellence in governance.”

Meet The International Journal for Governance Excellence Editorial Board

GOVERN for IMPACT is very pleased to introduce you to the six people who will serve on the Editorial Board for The International Journal for Governance Excellence. These Editorial Board Members were recruited due to their commitment to continuous learning and exploration in the field of leadership and governance excellence. In the next edition of the journal you will learn more about the collective role of the Editorial Board. Please join us in welcoming these volunteers to this important role at GOVERN for IMPACT.

Dr. Dolores Blueford

Principal Consultant, Blueford & Associates

Dr. Blueford is a performance-driven leader committed to assisting organizations build capacity that expands the scale, scope, and effectiveness of their primary organizational goals. She received a Ph.D. in Human and Organizational Systems from Fielding Graduate University and taught graduate-level courses in Systems Theory at Brandman University, Whidbey Island. She has a Master of Arts degree in Organizational Leadership from Chapman University and a Master of Arts degree from Fielding Graduate University in Human Development.

Dr. Blueford established a private consulting firm, Blueford & Associates, that focuses on developing individuals and organizations for global leadership in education and project management. She is the founder and former Project Manager for the Northwest Marine Manufacturing and Technology Center of Excellence, Anacortes, Washington. She was an Assistant Director, Responsibility Centered Management (RCM) project at the University of California, Los Angeles. Her academic paper, For-Profit Education: Market-Driven Approach in Higher Education was presented and published at the ICMC 2014 conference, New Delhi, India.

Dr. Blueford served on the governing boards of the Community Health Center of Snohomish County, Everett, Washington, and the Brigid Collins Family Support Center, Bellingham, Washington. She lives in Seattle, Washington.

Mr. Bill Charney

Principal Consultant, Charney & Associates

Bill Charney is widely recognized as one of North America's foremost authorities on board leadership and Policy Governance. Bill's primary focus is working with and helping individual boards clarify their expectations, roles and accountability to proactively establish performance standards for the organizations they lead.

A popular speaker and highly skilled consultant, Bill is a valuable resource for nonprofits, governmental agencies, corporations, and cooperatives of all sizes. Whether he is presenting a general session for a large convention, leading a two-hour seminar, or helping an individual board evaluate and improve its effectiveness, Bill has the ability to engage his audience while teaching. His unique perspective on effective board leadership has been shared at convention workshops throughout the United States, Scotland, Australia, United Kingdom, Canada, Sweden, Holland and Singapore.

Since earning an MBA in Organization Management at the University of Colorado at Boulder, Bill has served on numerous boards, ranging from a small association with no employees to an international trade association, both of which he chaired. Bill also has seen boards from the "CEO perspective." Bill founded and served nine years as the highly successful initial CEO of a prestigious Denver nonprofit (the Cherry Creek Arts Festival). His leadership tenure as CEO brought the nonprofit organization international acclaim as one of the most highly regarded arts festivals in the country, and for its pioneering volunteer management, environmental and corporate partnership programs.

Dr. Gwen DuBois-Wing

Principal, DuBois-Wing + Associates

Gwen DuBois-Wing is a leadership and governance strategist and consultant. Gwen has a passion to assist leaders and boards to maximize their effectiveness. In her work with CEOs, boards, leadership teams, and individuals, she brings a perspective as a CEO who worked with complex health system organizations, an executive coach, and an engaged practitioner/scholar. \

Gwen has extensive board experience within the healthcare system, community college system, and academic governance. As Chair of two separate Governance Committees, she led major governance renewal processes. Gwen has presented extensively regarding governance excellence and generative governance.

Gwen is the Principal of DuBois-Wing + Associates, a leadership and governance consulting firm. As well, Gwen is Associate Faculty in the School of Leadership Studies, Royal Roads University, Victoria, BC and a Fellow in the Institute for Social Innovation at Fielding Graduate University, Santa Barbara, CA. Gwen graduated with a PhD in Human and Organizational Systems, Fielding Graduate University. Her dissertation focused on Creating and Sustaining a Generative Mode in a boardroom. She is also a Professional Certified Coach with the International Coaching Federation

Ms. Karen Fryday-Field

Senior Consultant and Managing Partner

Meridian Edge Leadership & Governance Consulting

Karen Fryday-Field is the Senior Partner of the Meridian Edge Leadership and Governance Consulting Group located in London, Ontario, Canada. Karen engages leaders to be purpose and performance driven within a commitment to ethics, prudence, and justice. In this context, Karen provides leadership, strategic direction, and governance consultation/facilitation to boards, CEOs, and Senior Leadership Teams.

Karen consults regularly with boards to actively facilitate governance effectiveness and to develop new ways for boards to add value at the governance level. She has been a Governance Consultant and researcher since 1993 and completed the Policy Governance Academy Program in Atlanta, Georgia in 1996. Her client list of for-impact, public, and for-profit/corporate boards in Canada and the United States is extensive.

Karen Fryday-Field has over twenty years of experience in both public and for-impact leadership and consulting with a strong record and particular success in:

- Governance Structures, Approaches, and Effectiveness
- Generative and Strategic Thinking and Planning
- Vision and Mission Clarity/Focus
- Organizational Leadership Development
- Facilitating and Leading Change/Performance Development
- Strategic Risk Management Systems
- Process and Outcomes/Impact Measurement
- Program Planning and Evaluation
- Metrics/Balanced Scorecard Design and Implementation
- Group Facilitation and Team Building

Karen achieved the position of Ivey Scholar while graduating from the Executive MBA, at the Ivey School of Business at Western University. Karen has served for several years in senior leadership positions at a large teaching hospital and in several community-based public and privately owned health care organizations. Karen served as the Chief Facilitator for organizational re-engineering at Victoria Hospital in collaboration with Ernst & Young prior to the formation of the London Health Sciences Centre.

Karen completed an international benchmarking study on corporate governance best practices which included an evaluation of the unique work of the board, communication and accountability systems within corporate governance, and the roles and relationship of the board and Chief Executive Officer. She has completed several other externally funded research projects and Chairs GOVERN for IMPACT's Demonstrated Impact (Research) Team.

Karen has coached over 200 boards of Directors to clarify and rejuvenate their governance role and approach leveraging organizational capacity (including in the university/community college, health care, air industry, pharmaceutical, regulatory, social service sectors, and membership associations). She has written several articles and presented hundreds of workshops and seminars. Karen is committed to enabling organizations to lead and embrace change in order to accomplish their desired End outcomes/impacts.

Karen is also dedicated to serving in her community in order to build capacity and success. She has served as the Chair of the board for the United Way of London and Middlesex, Brescia University, Ontario Physiotherapy Association, and many more. Karen is a current Board Member of the Canadian Universities Board Association. Karen has the privilege of serving as the part-time CEO, GOVERN for IMPACT including leading its research arm and the development of this journal.

Mr. Ted Humphrey board of Directors, Nuvision Federal Credit Union

Ted Humphrey has been a board volunteer for 15 years and has been on a Policy Governance board for 10 years. In 2019, he completed the Policy Governance Proficiency Program, and he is currently the Governance Chair of Nuvision Federal Credit Union. He is an Adjunct Professor of English Literature. At the conference, he will draw upon board experience, work experience, and literature to discuss the challenges of humans coming together and trying to act rationally.

Ms. Linda Stier board Chair, Weaver Street Market

Linda brings innovative thought to governance, owner accountability and transformational learning. She has consulted across all sectors, enabling governing leadership that causes organizations to be effective and accountable. Linda has long-term experience as a governing practitioner as board member, board officer and board committee chair.

Linda completed the Policy Governance Academy in 1995. She was co-creator of the Policy Governance Think Tank on the global future of Policy Governance (1999) and a founding board member of the International Policy Governance Association. She is co-author of The Policy Governance Fieldbook and author of numerous articles and monographs on governance, Policy Governance and owner accountability.

Linda is a founding member of a global partnership engaged in a conversation for accountability as an essential component of organizational effectiveness. She participates on the Consistency Team of Govern for Impact and is currently board chair of Weaver Street Market, a consumer and worker owned cooperative.

Types of Articles Eligible for Publication in The International Journal for Governance Excellence

The GOVERN for IMPACT new International Journal for Governance Excellence has been created to share governance research, learning, concepts/constructs, practice insights, and opinions on governance related matters. We encourage academics, scholars, practitioners, consultants/coaches, and others interested in advancing governance excellence to contribute to the information presented in the journal.

The types of articles that will be published in the journal will include:

- Research reports
- Conceptual articles
- Case studies
- Literature reviews
- Opinion articles
- Article abstracts
- Letters to the editor
- Conference papers/reports

There will be a Policy Governance® system stream in the journal. The journal is also open to other ideas and concepts in governance and also to articles related to other disciplines which contribute to excellence in governance.

If you are interested in publishing an article, please notify us at ceo@governforimpact.org We will contact you to discuss your concept and timing based on the upcoming journal publication schedule.

We anticipate the journal will be published three (3) times in 2021 (February, May/June, October).

Advertising in The International Journal for Governance Excellence

In January 2021, it was announced that advertising space related to work in the field of governance and associated fields is available in The International Journal for Governance Excellence

We invite people to submit your request to advertise to in the journal to ceo@governforimpact.org and a member of our team will contact you.

Space is available on the virtual inside cover, back cover, or on inside pages. Volume discounts will be available upon request, i.e. reduced cost for a commitment of multiple ads over time.

Raise Your Awareness!

You can raise your visibility and support the journal and GOVERN for IMPACT by placing an advertisement in the journal. The journal in the first year will be sent over 4000 people interested in governance and board leadership.

Advertise your company or your products and services that are related to governance (certain requirements apply).

Advertising Specifications

Preferred Document Format

Adobe Acrobat PDF

Acceptable Document Formats / Applications

Adobe InDesign CC

Adobe Photoshop

Adobe Illustrator

Fonts

Only postscript and open type fonts accepted. True Type will not be accepted.

Advertising Pricing Structure

- Quarter page = $350 x 1 publication
- Half page = $650 x 1 publication
- Full page mid-magazine = $950 x 1 publication
- Virtual inside front cover = $1200
- Virtual back cover = $1100

1/2 Page
4-1/2" x 7-1/2"

1/2 Page
6-7/8" x 4-7/8"

1/4 Page
2-1/8" x 7-1/2"

1/4 Page
3-1/2" x 4-7/8"

Trim Size
8" x 10-3/4"

1 Page
6-7/8" x 10"

The International Journal for Governance Excellence

www.governforimpact.org